Lakehouse was awarded this 37 week internal modernisation programme by Kensington and Chelsea Tenant Management Organisation. Work to the 31 storey residential tower block started in April 2009 and provided thousands of residents with much needed improvements to their homes; 60% of those affected benefited from new kitchens and bathrooms.

Work included electrical rewires, asbestos removal (artexed ceilings and floor tiles), replacement of hot water systems and improvements to ventilation.

Grade II listed Trellick Tower is at the northern end of Golborne Road and is regarded by its residents as the 'Mini London of London'. Diversity is central to its identity and the area is an eclectic urban environment, heavily influenced by the large Spanish, Portugese and Moroccan communities.

On 13 June 2009 Lakehouse joined local residents and X Factor finalist JLS to take part in the 'Everest in a Day' challenge in support of My Generation and the British Schools Exploring Society.

Five Lakehouse staff joined a group of around 100 supporters to abseil down Trellick Tower. The British Army was on site with a small training wall so that those taking part could get some training by the best before making the big climb, and the big 322 feet drop.

Funds raised through this event were donated to the Next Generation programme which offers disaffected youth a fully mentored and supported 10 month programme of outdoor and expedition related skills training, culminating in a five-week wilderness expedition.
